

INCOME TAX IS NOW
BEFORE THE HOUSEM'MILLAN OPENS THE DEBATE
THIS MORNING.

Legislative Programme for the Week—The Theme of Discussion for Three Weeks Will Be the Income Tax—Senate to Talk of Hawaiian Complications.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29.—In the house this morning McMillan opened the debate by a strong plea for the income tax feature of the tariff bill. He urged that its adoption would be a public benefaction. His speech was in accord with the programme for the week which is that there will now be a cessation for a brief period of tariff talk in the house, and the members will address themselves for three days to the mysteries and perplexities of the income tax question. The McMillan bill upon this subject will be submitted as an amendment to the Wilson customs bill, so as to unite in one measure all the schemes for raising revenue aside from the sales of bonds. The general debate on this proposition will occupy to-day and to-morrow. Wednesday the bill will be considered under the five-minute rule for amendments.

After the duty shall have been taken in committee of the whole Wednesday afternoon, on making the whisky and income tax schemes a part of the Wilson bill, the latter will be ready to be reported on Thursday to the house for ratification. Before the final vote is taken, however, Messrs. Reed, Wilson, and Crisp will address the house on the general subject of tariff and revenue, their text being the perfected bill. It is likely that a vote will not be reached until quite late Thursday and possibly not before Friday.

When the committee of the whole house arose at the expiration of the session Saturday afternoon, but one amendment proposed by the committee on ways and means remained unacted on. It proposed to increase the duty on barley and barley malt from 30 and 30 per cent ad valorem respectively, to 30 and 35 per cent. It failed of adoption because of lack of time and Chairman Richardson said he should hold that it was pending, but whether or not that would be the judgment of the speaker of the house he could not say. Two or three of the defeats the committee have sustained, have been notable, but they retrieved one of them Saturday in re-establishing the time when the free wool and manufactured wool schedules should go into effect. The house had decided in favor of Representative Tom L. Johnson's motion to have both go into operation the day of the approval of the bill. Saturday the ways and means committee got the dates restored as proposed by them—free wool, Aug. 1, 1894; manufactured wool, Dec. 1, 1894. Another defeat from which the committee did not recover resulted in placing all sugar—raw and refined—on the free list, and abolishing the bounty at once. This was the most important incident in the consideration of the bill. All attempts to take iron ore, coal, and lumber from the free list were unsuccessful.

Among the more important changes effected in the text of the bill were:

Putting plows, rakes, disk and tooth harrows, thrashers, cotton-gins and harvesters on the free list (over the committee's objection).

Taking crude opium containing containing 9 per cent and over of morphine from the free list and fixing the duty at $1 a pound.

Increasing the duty on morphine and morphia salts from 50 cents to 75 cents.

Striking out the reciprocal clause from the petroleum paragraph.

FEDERAL ELECTIONS AND HAWAII

Subjects That Will Occupy the Attention of the Senate This Week.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29.—The senate will probably wind up the election law debate this week, so far as the republicans are concerned, by the conclusion of the speech of Mr. Chandler of New Hampshire and two further addresses by Mr. Hawley of Connecticut and Mr. Higgins of Delaware. But both the senators from Tennessee will take occasion to reply to Mr. Chandler's attacks on election methods in their state before the debate ends.

Hawaiian relations are still an open question in the senate. The resolution reported from the committee on foreign relations declaratory of the sense of congress in the matter is still pending. Notwithstanding the fact that the report was almost unanimous it appears that some of the republican senators, following in the lead of Mr. Allison, find the first section, declaring against annexation at the present time, is objectionable to them. So it may be that the resolution, which at first promised to pass speedily, will continue to occupy the attention of the senate for some time, and particularly in this probable if an issue is raised by the moving of the Dolph amendment requesting the recall of Minister Willis or by Mr. Vest's insistence upon his amendment materially modifying the language of the section touching annexation.

Republicans Will Not Cases. WASHINGTON, Jan. 29.—Representative Burrows of Michigan says the republican members of the house will have no caucus on the tariff or income tax question. Neither have they agreed on a policy. There is no need of an affirmative policy.

"We are simply passive while the majority proceeds to execute its commission," said Mr. Burrows. "We recognize that it would be futile for us to attempt to execute any affirmative policy. We have offered amendments, but they have either failed of recognition or have been defeated by the majority. What need, therefore, is there on our side of the house of a policy? We will quietly wait while the other side furnishes the policy."

Bidding for Bonds Not so Lively.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29.—The action of the house committee on the judiciary in reporting the Bailey resolution favorably has had the effect of deterring any large bids so far from being received for the new bonds. The action, too, of the Knights of Labor in seeking an injunction against Secretary Carlisle to prevent him from issuing bonds has had a disquieting effect. Secretary Carlisle will, while in New York, assure all prospective bidders they need have no fears on any score about bidding for the bonds and that they will be amply protected.

Mr. Peckham's Nomination.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29.—News from New York is to the effect that Hill's friends are confident the nomination of Peckham will not be confirmed. It is also given out there that the President is ready to make this struggle with Hill a fight to a finish and that he will withhold nominations until the senate determines what it will do in the Peckham affair, which means in effect that the President is to make of this a test case.

DOCTORS AGAIN.

Cannot Decide as to the Cause of Cronin's Death.

CHICAGO, Jan. 29.—Medical expert testimony took Saturday's session of the Coughlin trial. Dr. Hektoen, the first witness, swore he was unable to testify whether Dr. Cronin had died from kidney disease or from the wounds found on his head. "This farce of expert testimony is expected to terminate early this week. At the conclusion of Dr. Hektoen's examination, court adjourned to 10 o'clock Monday morning."

Coughlin himself will be the chief witness for the defense, and the state is rather curious to know what sort of a story he will tell. The absence or presence of a motive for Coughlin to desire the death of Dr. Cronin will be an important point to be brought out in his examination, and when it shall appear that he was a member of the committee that tried Dr. Cronin, it is difficult to see how the investigation thus begun is to be limited. From the rate of progress made since the defense began it may be inferred that the last day of the trial will not be far from March 1. The defense is confident of an acquittal or a disagreement of the jury. Failing in this they claim enough errors have been made in the case to insure the Supreme court granting a new trial, when the result would be the same as in the event of a disagreement in the jury. The case would never be tried again. In any event, Coughlin feels safe from all harm greater than a year or two longer in prison.

DOES NOT WANT BONDS.

Holman of Indiana Thinks the Country Will Do Well Without Them.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29.—Mr. Holman of Indiana is not in accord with the administration on the bond question. He intends soon to introduce a resolution in the house reciting the fact that there is no justification for increasing the interest-bearing debt of the government, but that the condition of the nation's finances demands a retrenchment in the expenditures. When it was proposed during the panic of 1873 to authorize the sale of bonds to replenish the treasury, Congressman Holman put through the house a resolution similar in tone to that which he is preparing.

"Following the idea of retrenchment," says Mr. Holman, "the congress following the panic of 1873 made sweeping reductions in expenditures. The people were pleased and there never was another demand for the sale of bonds until the recent agitation which resulted in Secretary Carlisle calling for bids."

Talmage May Decide to Stay.

NEW YORK, Jan. 29.—It is probable, some of the Brooklyn people think, that Rev. Dr. Talmage may consent to withdraw his resignation as pastor of the tabernacle. Mr. Talmage attended a meeting of the trustees of the church yesterday and also a meeting of elders. At each meeting the church debt was discussed and it was stated that it was believed if the debt was wiped out Mr. Talmage would withdraw his resignation. Dr. Talmage did not deny that he might stay in that event.

Vaillant will Lose His Head.

PARIS, Jan. 29.—It is said the pardons committee, after examining the appeal of Auguste Vaillant, the anarchist who was sentenced to death for throwing the bomb in the chamber of deputies, has decided to let justice take its course. President Carnot has intimated that he will not interfere. It is rumored that Vaillant will be executed directly after the return of Deibler, the Paris headman, to the capital.

MINISTER IN A CELL
ON A GRAVE CHARGE.

RACINE JAIL SHELTERS AN EC-CLESIASTICAL GUEST.

Rev. B. P. Hepp Is Still in Custody and Still Protesting His Innocence—Waterford People Are Satisfied That He Is Responsible for Pretty Effie Brownell's Death.

RACINE, Jan. 27.—A minister of the gospel occupies a cell in the Racine county jail for the first time since that structure was built. He is Rev. B. P. Hepp, of the English Methodist church, located at Waterford in this county. He is the reverend gentleman at whose home Effie Brownell, a plump and pretty servant girl, seventeen years of age, died in confinement, and on account of which he has come into unpleasant notoriety.

Mr. Hepp is twenty-seven years of age; a blonde with smooth face and light flowing hair of considerable length. There is nothing about his appearance to indicate that he could be guilty of such a crime as he is charged with.

Waterford people in general believe he is guilty but he insists he can prove his innocence. There has been talk of his mental unsoundness but to a reporter he said that he did not believe that he was becoming insane on the subject of religion, but he admitted that he was subject to epileptic fits. There was considerable talk about an erratic funeral sermon that he preached not long ago.

WAGES ARE REDUCED.

Union Pacific Employees Must Accept a Large Cut.

OMAHA, Neb., Jan. 29.—Saturday afternoon a messenger of the legal department of the Union Pacific presented a petition for a new schedule of wages to Judge Dundy at Lincoln. The judge took the petition under advisement and, after examining into the merits of the case, signed the order. After authorizing the receivers to make the cut in wages the judge says:

"It is by the court ordered that each and every of the employees of this system under the receivers, refrain and desist from any and all manner of combination, confederation, and conspiracy to do any act or thing which will in any manner interfere with the receivers in the conduct of the business. It is by the court commanded that each and every of the said employees desist and refrain from disabling or rendering unfit for use any property in the possession of the receivers and from interfering in any manner by force, threats, or otherwise, with men who desire to continue in the service of the receivers, and from interfering in any manner by force, threats, or otherwise, with men employed by or seeking service under the receivers to take the places of any of those employees who may see fit to quit the service of the receivers."

The reduction of conductors and brakemen on the Nebraska division is as follows: Passenger brakemen, cut from $70 and $75 to $60, and $60 men to $50; and the mileage has been reduced on freight runs, conductors from $95 to $90; brakemen from $70 to $60.

Wyoming division—conductors from $125 and $120 to $112.50; brakemen from $65 and $75 to $60, and mileage cut down slightly.

Kansas division—Colored porters from $55 to $50, conductors from $100 to $90, and on other runs cuts varying from $5 to $15 were made, according to salary.

Colorado division—Cuts are larger, some being as much as $20, but otherwise run about the same.

On the Utah division the changes run from $5 to $10 a month and not so many are affected.

On the Idaho division cuts range from $5 to $15, according to salary and importance of work, and mileage was reduced somewhat.

On the Pacific division reductions vary from $5 to $25, and are the most marked, but make the salaries, which have been higher than on other divisions, more nearly equal.

The wages paid engineers, firemen, hostlers, and wipers are cut three-fifths of a cent per mile. The mechanics in the shops get the same rates of pay as before. The hours of labor constitute cuts or raises with them.

Newspaper Office Burned.

OMAHA, Neb., Jan. 29.—The office of the Plattsmouth Herald was destroyed by fire yesterday morning. The fire was of incendiary origin. An attempt was made three weeks ago to burn the building, but the fire was discovered in time to save it. The paper was owned by Blanchard & Potter. The loss will amount to $6,000. The insurance is $2,800. The owners say the paper will resume.

AKRON, Ohio, Jan. 29.—The Flower & Co. plant of the American Cereal company in this city was destroyed by fire yesterday afternoon. Loss, $150,000. BATH, ME., IS SWEEPED BY FIRE

Defective Water Mains Responsible—Military Patrol the Streets

BATH, Maine, Jan. 29.—A large portion of the business section of the city was laid in ruins by fire yesterday. The fire, at first an insignificant affair, was discovered at 9 a. m. in a stable in the rear of the Sagadahok block. The waterworks system proved useless, there having been a big break in the main pipe Saturday, and without water the fire department was powerless to check the spread of the flames. As a result the Sagadahok house, two national banks, a savings bank and a dozen stores were destroyed.

Mayor Shaw sent for aid half an hour after the fire started and steamers were sent from Portland and Lewiston and two land engines came from Brunswick. It was nearly 3 o'clock before the fire was under control. To protect property that had been removed from the burned and threatened buildings and to clear the crowd of onlookers from the streets, Mayor Shaw called out Company C of the Second regiment, and subsequently the militia received orders from Gov. Cleaves to patrol the streets.

The total loss is estimated at between $500,000 and $750,000, on which there is insurance of one-half. The only serious accident attending the fire was caused by falling glass striking a fireman on the head.

FIRE IN A GROCERY CONCERN.

Nearly Twenty-five Thousand Dollars Lost with Partial Insurance.

EVANSVILLE, Ind., Jan. 29.—Fire broke out yesterday in a fuel room on the second floor of Vickery Bros. grocery. The front portion of the second floor is occupied by the Young Business-Men's club, the McCormick Harvesting company, and the Evansville Supply company, while the rear is occupied as a storeroom for groceries and was filled with combustible material. The damage to stock by fire and water is estimated at $15,000. The damage to the offices was principally by water and is estimated at $9,000.

Two Shoe Factories Burned Out.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Jan. 29.—Fire broke out on the fourth floor of the five-story building at Nineteenth and Olive streets at 4 o'clock yesterday and before the flames could be subdued the third, fourth and fifth floors and their contents were destroyed. The building is owned by L. L. Reyburn and was valued at $40,000. The stocks and machinery of the two shoe factories were worth $90,000. The total loss is estimated at $100,000, two-thirds covered by insurance.

MINERS' BATTLE AT TOM'S RUN

Many Rioters Are Captured and Locked Up in Freight Cars.

MANSFIELD, Pa., Jan. 29.—Word was received last night that a battle was in progress at W. J. Steen's mines on Tom's run, between a band of rioters and a force of deputies. The report was brought by W. J. Steen, operator of the mines which bear his name. He came to Mansfield to secure more deputies. It is said an engagement took place between the forces, in which a number of shots were fired. Mr. Steen reported that a number of rioters had been captured and locked up in empty freight cars. At 10 o'clock the uprising was suppressed and complaints have been filed against the ringleaders. The other districts are quiet. Franz Josef Stepij, the rioter who was shot during the battle at the Reading mines Saturday, is dead.

Upon the request of a numerous signed petition from Bridgeville a special detachment of deputies has been sent to guard that town. The citizens fear an assault. This is the town which mustered up a squad of twenty volunteer deputies while the Schults coal tippie was in flames, and ran down the mob of rioters, capturing a number of them, who are now in the county jail. Through scouts who were sent out it was learned that the dispersed rioters had re-assembled at their rendezvous in Heidelberg and had pledged themselves to revenge on the citizens of Bridgeville. It was also decided to revenge the death of their comrade at the Reading mines. They have pledged themselves to destroy the Reading coal tippie. For this reason special precautions are being taken in both districts. The Bridgeville deputies, with reinforced numbers, are on duty with the company deputies.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Jan. 29.—Trouble is likely to break out among the Mansfield miners at any moment. Sheriff Richards and 200 deputies are preparing for an attack to be made on Armstrong's, Beadling's, and Schuette's coal mines. The guards at these places have been doubled and every precaution is being taken against surprise. Miners loyal to the interests of their employers, but supposed by the strikers to be with them, have reported that plans have been made for an attack just before dawn. To meet it members of Company K of the Fourteenth Regiment, National Guard, have been sworn in as deputy sheriffs. A score or more of citizens of Mansfield and its vicinity have also offered their services, which were accepted by the sheriff. Many of the volunteers are miners who want to quell anarchy even at the cost of their lives.

An appeal was made to the sheriff to ask the governor for troops. The sheriff refused to do so, saying he has enough men at his command to quell any outbreak. The deputies have been armed with revolvers, guns, and ammunition and have been ordered to shoot at the first sign of an attack. The Panhandle and the Pittsburg & Lake Erie railroads have placed extra guards on their property. The plans for the attack were made at a meeting of over 300 rioters in the woods back of Mansfield last night.

A lynching was narrowly averted at Steen's mines last night. A party of rioters captured an offending Hun, known as "Monkey Joe," and took him to a bridge near by, where they produced a rope and prepared to hang the half-witted foreigner. His cries for mercy attracted the attention of the clerks in the company's store. They ran to the rescue of Joe and the rioters fled.

CRANK THREATENS MCKINLEY.

Makes Two Demands for Money and May Cause Trouble.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Jan. 29.—George Lantis, a resident of the northern part of this city called at the executive mansion yesterday afternoon and demanded an audience with Gov. McKinley. He said he was in need of money and must have it at once. He was in danger of losing his home because there was a mortgage on it which would soon fall due, and he wanted Gov. McKinley to loan or give him $15,000. Lantis was induced to leave without seeing the governor, but soon returned, saying he would not go until his demand was satisfied. He was persuaded again to go, but he threatens to return. His action has alarmed those who saw him for the welfare of the governor.

Robbed and Killed.

LIMA, Ohio, Jan. 29.—Joseph Shipman, a stock buyer, was killed and robbed at Weston last night while he was going home after arriving on a night train. DANE COUNTY TRAMPS
WON'T LIVE SO HIGHROCK'S EXAMPLE FOLLOWED AND FEES ABOLISHED.

Jail Will Be Conducted on the Same System as that in this City, the Sheriff Receiving a Salary of $2,500 and $3000 a Year for Boarding Prisoners.

MADISON, Jan., 28.—Dane county has had more trouble about tramps than Rock county ever did. The county has been a haven for vagrants and all of Judge Donovan's severity did not repress them. A new scheme is now to be tried. The county board has decided to abolish the fee system of the office to the county, exclusive of board of prisoners, for which a contract has been made with the present sheriff at $3,000 per year. The salary system does not take effect until January 1, 1895, after the next election. The system is substantially the same as Rock county is trying.

MINERS EXPECT TROUBLE.

Heavy Reductions in Wages to Be Asked for in Indiana.

TERRE HAUTE, Ind., Jan. 29.—There is no longer any doubt among coal operators and miners that there will be a struggle, and probably a long strike, before a wage schedule for next year can be agreed to. Indiana operators recently considered the advisability of asking the men to accept a reduction before the end of the scale year, which is May 1. It was decided not to do so unless the price of mining in Ohio should be reduced before that time, but it was the unanimous opinion of the operators that they should ask for a reduction of 15 cents a ton for next year. Officers of the miners' unions expect trouble not only in this state but in Ohio, western Pennsylvania, Illinois and Iowa, which states are classed as being in the same market. President McBride of the United Mine Workers of America has said that it looks as if the men in all these states would have to strike to prevent a reduction of wages.

CARRY OUT THE PLATFORM.

Proposition to Provide Penalties for Selling Liquor in Iowa.

DES MOINES, Iowa, Jan. 29.—Senator Finn has prepared a bill amendatory to the prohibition law, which he will introduce in the senate. It provides that the present law shall be amended by the addition of the following: "That nothing in this chapter contained shall prevent any city or incorporated town from providing by ordinance such further and additional penalties for the sale of intoxicating liquors as shall best serve the cause of temperance and morality." He says that he can see no valid reason why such an amendment would not carry out the spirit of the republican platform.

QUICK WORK DONE IN THE STONE CASE.

GAZETTES WITH THE VERDICT MADE A SENSATION.

Before the Crowd Got to the Foot Of the Court House Stairs Two Boys Were there with Papers Containing a Full Account of the Proceedings.

Two boys with bundles of Gazettes announcing the Ashton verdict and giving the day's proceedings in full, were at the foot of the court house steps before the first of the six hundred people got down from the court room Saturday afternoon.

The crowd had just heard the verdict read up stairs, and could hardly realize that it had been put in type so soon. The boys sold out as fast as they could make change. Newspapers have been in great demand in Janesville for the last few days. The Stone case aroused great interest. Everybody was following the progress of the trial, and read the report of the testimony eagerly. No vital point in the case was omitted from The Gazette's reports, although other news matter was fully cared for at the same time. To chronicle the verdict Saturday night a second edition was necessary. In order to get papers off by mail and express to Clinton, Edgerton, Milton, Evansville, Stoughton and Milton Junction each evening, The Gazette must go to press at 4 o'clock sharp. At 4 o'clock the jury in the Stone case was still out. The paper was put to press, and enough papers ran for the out-of-town circulation, but everything was held in readiness for news from the court house. At 4:40 the telephone rang. The jury had just come in. The story was written in short "takes" and given out to different compositors. Before Clerk McGowan had finished asking each one of the twelve jurors: "Was this and is this your verdict?" the new article was in type and the "form" had been opened without lifting it from the press. A moment later the press was again running swiftly and carrier boys were clamoring for "extras."

Big Demand for Gazettes.

They sold out as fast as they reached the street. It was not the only night business had been good with them of late. There was the same quick sale Thursday. The legal dilly-dallying in Florida worked interest in the great fictitious battle to a fever heat and the public awaited the result with nervous impatience. The Gazette telegraph franchise gave it close connection with Jacksonville and the news was in this office as soon as it was in the offices at Milwaukee and Chicago. The Gazette was on the street at 4 o'clock with an account of the contest while the 3 o'clock edition of the Milwaukee papers which reached here at 5:30 had nothing but the fact that the men had entered the ring. Twenty news boys in addition to the regular force of carriers spread Gazettes around town between 4 and 6 o'clock Thursday and sold out rapidly. The only difficulty was in getting extras enough to supply them without neglecting regular subscribers. Many who have wanted Gazettes on special occasions of late have been disappointed. The moral is that it pays to be a subscriber and have the best paper in the state delivered regularly.

NEW RECEIVER FOR THE TIMES.

Further Court Proceedings that Involve the Ghost of the Dead Company.

The ghost of Times Printing Company, Col. Clarence Clark's corporation and the lineal descendant of the roster contract, still walks the courthouse corridors. Proceedings supplementary to the suit that resulted in a receivership for the company has commenced and a petition was filed declaring that the Times Company was in a bad way from the outset.

The American Type Founders Company has begun proceedings to make all members of the Times company liable in full as partners and not merely to the extent of their stock as stockholders. It is charged that the Times Company was insolvent ever since its organization; that half of its stock was never subscribed and that not so much as 10 per cent. of its capital stock was paid in.

The American Type Founders Company supplied the Times Company with printing materials after Col. Clark removed his establishment from Madison to Milwaukee.

NEW TELEPHONE NOT SO CHEAP

Manager McLeod Says That Late Patents Bar the Way.

Janesville people are figuring on getting telephones for nothing after Wednesday, when the Bell patent expires. They may be disappointed. Manager McLeod, of the Wisconsin Telephone, says that the expiration of one of the patents on January 30 will only permit the use of the apparatus that the Wisconsin company started in with fifteen years ago.

"The first patent which concerns us, issued to Mr. Bell on the 7th of March, 1876, and which expired in 1893," he said, "was the fundamental patent for the discovery of the art of transmitting articulate sounds by the employment of a vibratory or undulatory current, in contradistinction to a merely intermittent or pulsatory current, etc. The apparatus by which this discovery was made available for commercial use was the hand, or magneto telephone, issued on in the following January, and which will come into common use by limitation January 30 next. You will remember that in the early days of our business the hand telephone was used for the purpose of both transmitting and receiving, but the needs for inter-town communication proved it unequal to what it was then considered long distance transmission, fifty miles or thereabouts. When the emergency was met by the invention of the transmitter, augmented in power by the aid of a battery, and from time to time improved to its present efficiency by parties whose names you will find stamped on them, viz, Edison, Bell, Blake and Berliner. The patent on the transmitter now known as the Berliner patent, has, it appears, been held in interference in the patent office by those several inventors for years past, until November 17, 1891, in fact, when we find it issued with all rights assigned to the American Bell Telephone company. This is the patent for which Attorney-General Miller has brought action against the Bell company to annul, on the ground that its continuance is contrary to public policy."

COAL SHEDS ABLAZE ON SUNDAY MORNING

HORSES REMOVED WITH DIFFICULTY BY FIREMEN.

Gately Buildings on Marion Street the Scene of a Small Blaze Which Starts in the Boiler Room—Walls Packed With Sawdust Makes the Department's Work Harder.

For three hours Sunday morning the fire department battled with a small fire in the Marion street buildings of the Janesville Coal Company. Con J. Murphy of the east side horse company did the heroic. He was one of the first at the fire and hearing that there was a lot of horses in the barn he tore open the door and with what help he could get succeeded in rescuing two horses and a cow. The third horse was down in it: stall and apparently suffocated. Ropes were strung around the animal and under Murphy's direction it was dragged to the door which was some distance from stall. The horse was struggling and kicking all the time. Its head was finally got out of the door, but too late. Making one desperate effort to breathe in the stifling smoke the horse dropped on the threshold and was dead.

Fire Caught in the Boiler Room.

The fire was discovered at 1:30 o'clock by Night Officer Conroy, who turned in an alarm from box 51. It had evidently been burning for some time; it caught in the boiler room and worked north into the barn and south towards the company's office. The building is an old one, ceiled and packed between the studding with sawdust. All visible fire was extinguished in a few minutes after the fire department arrived, but the fire got into the sawdust packing and was difficult to find and to be reached. After three hours' work in the cold it was thought to be extinguished and the department returned home. The property was partly insured, there being $500 on the building and $500 on the engine. The loss on the building and engine is not heavy. The most serious loss is the horse, which Manager J. H. Gately says was worth $250. The insurance was held by companies represented by Metcalf & Cleland.

THE ALARM AT MIDNIGHT.

Explosions in the Kitchen Which Did Not Turn Out as Expected.

The head of a home in Northeast Baltimore was awakened by his wife with the information that burglars were in the house. He ridiculed her suspicions at first, but some ominous noises from the region of the kitchen finally convinced him that something was wrong. He got up and not having a weapon, seized a bronze ornament and boldly started on a tour of investigation. Entering the dining room he managed to overturn several chairs as a preliminary warning to the invaders, as he did not care to surprise them. The ominous sounds continued, however, and cold chills began chasing each other in rapid transit style up and down his spinal column. Urged on by encouraging stage whispers from his wife, he moved toward the kitchen, clutching his weapon until its outlines were imprinted on his hands. Then he pushed open the door. As it swung back a pistol-like report echoed through the house, causing the investigator to beat a hasty retreat, firmly convinced that he was shot. Under the gas light he soon found that he was unhurt and again advanced on the kitchen. This time he entered and lit a match, but just then the kitchen door shut with a bang, putting out the light and increasing the terror which had taken possession of him. After another retreat the kitchen was again entered and this time the gas was lighted. Then surprise took the place of fear. The kitchen looked as if a small-sized cyclone had struck it. Broken china and glass encumbered the floor, and everything was in confusion. But no burglar could be seen. Searching further, the cause was soon discovered. The wife had put up a quantity of catsup in bottles and placed them on a shelf. During the night the catsup began to ferment. Several bottles had exploded, throwing surrounding objects to the floor and creating havoc generally.

AN ADEQUATE REASON

His name was George Carew, and at the time of which I write he was a passenger on board the Royal Mail steamer Cobra on her homeward voyage from Buenos Ayres to Southampton. It was late in the year, and the passengers were comparatively few. I cannot with truth say that Carew was a general favorite on board. He was taciturn as a rule, and when he was not taciturn he was apt to be dogmatic.

Among the male passengers he was usually spoken of as "a decent fellow enough, but queer." The feminine portion of the community thought—or said they thought—him uninteresting. Among their number was a tall, pretty blond, who had gradually pierced the armor of his reserve, and in whose company he had even been seen to smile. They became very good friends—so much so indeed as to draw down upon the young lady's head various maternal lectures on the folly of encouraging young men who were nobodies. But as Carew, of course, did not hear these lectures, and as Miss Ida Lennox was a self-willed, young person, their friendship suffered no interruption.

There was a certain Mrs. Bouverie on board, an extremely handsome widow, in whom Carew, for some unknown reason, had aroused a violent dislike. She was clever as well as handsome, but was possessed of a passionate and somewhat uncertain temper—which last, however, in virtue of her many counterbalancing good qualities, was universally condoned.

One evening at dinner Mrs. Bouverie was expatiating to those nearest to her on the value and antiquity of a very curious and beautiful ring which she wore, and which she had picked up in a tour through Italy. She affirmed it to be at least 300 years old. It was a broad gold band, chased richly and with marvelous delicacy and set all round at regular intervals with large diamonds of exquisite brilliancy. Inside were two capital letters, N. C., each letter formed of tiny seed pearls sunk into the gold. Mrs. Bouverie, who was of a romantic turn, was of opinion that it had been an ancient betrothal ring. There was a half effaced date inside, which the widow's right hand neighbor, a pale, consumptive looking clergyman, was in vain trying to decipher through a small magnifying glass. Presently a lady opposite begged to be allowed to examine the ring, and from her it was passed from hand to hand pretty well up and down the length of the table.

But, strange to say, it did not come back to its owner. It had apparently disappeared. Every one declared it had passed safely out of his or her hands. Where was it then? There was a great commotion, of course; everybody rose, and a thorough search was made, on and under the table and from one end to the other of the long saloon.

The ring, however, was not forthcoming. Its owner had by this time become somewhat excited, and a rather disagreeable scene ensued. In point of fact, Mrs. Bouverie insinuated that some one had appropriated her ring. Upon this, some of the male passengers angrily suggested that, if Mrs. Bouverie entertained suspicions of that nature, all present had better turn out their pockets. To this proposition there was a general assent.

All resumed their seats, and there was a hurried disenthombing of keys, letters, pocket handkerchiefs, etc., but no ring.

Carew, to the surprise of all, quietly refused to exhibit the contents of his pockets.

"But merely as a matter of form, Mr. Carew," expostulated the captain.

The young man, however, repeated his refusal contemptuously, but more inflexibly, if anything, than before.

There was an awkward silence.

Then Mrs. Bouverie forgot herself.

"May I ask, sir," she said, addressing Carew in an excited tone, "why you refuse to do as all your fellow passengers have done?"

"You may, madam," was the brief and haughty answer.

"Well, sir, and why not?"

"Because I have a very special reason for not doing so," he answered in a carefully repressed voice.

"And that reason?"

"I fear I must decline to give it," he answered quietly, but with an ominous flash in his gray eyes.

"Then you are aware of the imputation your refusal casts upon your character?" inquired the lady scornfully.

"That is a matter of the utmost indifference to me," was the icy answer.

But the speaker's hand, as it lay upon the table, opened and shut in a quick, nervous fashion which showed that he was less unmoved than he looked.

Whereupon Mrs. Bouverie waxed more and more indiscreet, and all but accused Carew of having the ring in his possession.

"Mrs. Bouverie, Mrs. Bouverie," remonstrated the captain, "this is really not quite fair."

Here Carew, who had been growing whiter every moment, rose from his seat.

"I regret that you should have such an opinion of me as your words imply, Mrs. Bouverie," he said in a queer, uncertain voice. "May I suggest that you drop the subject for the present? My temper is not all that it might be, and I should be sorry to be guilty of discourtesy to a lady."

Then he left the saloon and went on deck.

After this day, however, Carew observed a gradual but marked difference in his fellow passengers' demeanor toward him. His greetings were received coldly, though with scrupulous politeness. Groups began to melt insensibly away at his approach, or his advent was a signal for a dead silence.

If this general boycotting affected the object of it, he did not show it, but simply withdrew into himself and avoided other people as deliberately as they avoided him. To only one person did he make an advance, and he only made them once. It was in this way:

Early one morning he was standing looking moodily to leeward, when he suddenly became aware that Miss Lennox had come on deck and was leaning against one of the doors of the covered stairway. Their eyes met. She blushed deeply, made a half hesitating movement of her head—which might have meant a morning salutation or might not—and turned away. But Carew took steps toward her.

"One moment, Miss Lennox," he said in an odd voice. "Will you tell me why you have avoided me so persistently during the last few days?"

"Avoided you?" she stammered awkwardly enough. "Oh—I, really—not at all. But—but—"

Carew smiled slowly, but his lips were pale. "I beg your pardon," he said quietly. Then he lifted his cap and walked away.

As he did so he saw one of the male passengers grinning from behind an abnormally large cigar. He did not pitch the youth overboard, but he could have done so with pleasure.

After this little episode, Carew was, if possible, more ostracized than ever. Only the captain treated him with comparative cordiality. But as the days went on he, too, became less kind, especially after one forenoon when he opened to Carew the matter in hand. The young man cut him short at once. "I don't care to discuss the thing. You can believe what your passengers seem to believe, or you can let it alone. It is nothing to me."

Captain North shrugged his shoulders and walked off. Carew laughed. His laugh was short, though, and bitter.

If this suspected young man had been anybody in particular it is possible they might not have been so hard upon him. But as he was simply George Carew, with nothing beyond an average good looking face and well set up figure to recommend him, and as, moreover, his clothes had a look of having seen better days and were by no means of the latest cut, he was clearly not an acquaintance to be regretted.

At dinner that night Carew found himself next a small, gray clad young woman, with a pale, serious face and a smooth, birdlike head of dark brown hair. She had also, as he absently noted, exquisitely shaped hands. He had never entered into conversation with the little woman; indeed he had hardly been aware of her existence beyond hearing the captain address her once or twice as Miss Neville.

As he took his seat beside her tonight, however, she said in a low, clear voice, "Good evening, Mr. Carew."

It was so many days since any of the lady passengers had addressed him at all that he actually started.

"I beg your pardon?" he said.

"I only said good evening," the girl in gray made answer, looking up at him with a little smile.

Then he noticed that her teeth were very pretty and her eyes very satisfactory indeed. Before he had time to speak, she went on: "The captain says that before many days we shall be in the bay of Biscay. I have not crossed it since I was a little child. I suppose it will be frightfully rough?"

"I think it is more than likely," he answered, gazing steadily at his plate.

Whereupon they drifted into a subdued, friendly conversation which lasted till the end of the meal. Carew was not a particularly soft hearted fellow, but it touched him strangely—this unlooked for partisanship. It gave him a queer, unwonted lump in his throat and made him feel womanish, which annoyed him.

Next morning he saw the girl in gray on deck. She was standing quite still, watching the screaming sea birds that flew and dipped astern. Her pale, serious little face already seemed to him like the face of a friend. As he passed her with a slight bow she turned, held out her hand and bade him a cheery good morning, supplementing it by some trifling remark regarding the weather. He stopped, answered her and stood beside her for a minute or two. Then he flung away his cigar and leaned his arm on the railing.

His companion scanned his face swiftly and covertly. She thought he looked dispirited, and she felt for him, for she was a tender hearted little woman.

They talked on indifferent subjects until luncheon and repeated the process between that meal and dinner and also in the evening. And so it came to pass that Carew began to look upon this small, gray clad creature as his one friend in all his present world. He learned a great deal about her from her half unconscious confidences—among other things that her Christian name was Joyce, and that she was an orphan, and that she had known trouble. But she learned little or nothing about him.

The Cobra touched at Corunna, where one or two Englishmen came on board. Then came the redoubtable bay of Biscay.

On the night they left Corunna there was a glorious moon, under the rays of which Miss Neville and Carew were walking up and down on deck.

The steamer was rolling a great deal, and he had offered her his arm, which she had accepted. She treated him in a frank, unembarrassed fashion, almost as a sister might have done—and he? Well, men are susceptible, you know, and I am bound to say his feelings to her were not altogether those of a brother.

When they had taken a few turns in silence, she said suddenly, "Mr. Carew, we seem to have become such good friends by this time that I should like to say something to you which otherwise I should not presume to say."

She looked up at him as she spoke, and he looked down at her.

"You know you may say anything you please to me," he said, with a curious lingering tenderness in his voice.

"You won't think it a liberty, will you?" she went on.

"I shall assuredly not think it a liberty," was the brief answer. Certainly her eyes were very lovely. They thrilled him through and through.

"I want to ask you, then," she said somewhat nervously, "why you allow those people to believe what they believe about you?"

She felt him wince slightly. There was a silence. The monotonous throbbing of the engines amidships mingled with floating scraps of half heard talk and laughter.

Then Carew said in a hard, bitter voice: "Unfortunately I am not responsible for their beliefs, Miss Neville. Besides, what they believe of me may be—true. I am—pardon me—an utter stranger to you; you have no reason to believe in my innocence."

"I do believe in your innocence, though," she murmured, an excited thrill running through her voice.

"May I ask why?" He spoke clearly, but she felt his arm tremble under her hand.

For one swift moment she looked up at him, and her eyes were full of tears. But he did not see them, for he was gazing straight before him.

"Why?" she repeated, with a curious sobbing little laugh. "Because I—know!"

A minute later she was gone, and he was watching the last flutter of her gown disappearing in the direction of the stairway.

Late that night Carew sat in his cabin, leaning his elbows on his knees, and staring earnestly at something he held between his fingers, something that twinkled and sparkled as the light of the electric lamp fell upon it. It was a broad gold gipsy ring, richly chased, and set at intervals with large diamonds. Inside were two Roman letters formed of tiny seed pearls.

For two days after that it blew a pretty fair gale. It rained a good deal, too, at intervals; and such of the passengers as were not violently seasick in their berths kept to the saloon or the music room, with the exception of two or three hardy males, of whom Carew was one.

As he passed the door of the stairway toward the evening of the second day, he saw Miss Neville, who had just struggled so far, and was clinging to the door to windward. She was looking white and ill, he thought, but when he told her so she only laughed.

"Do you care to come for a turn?" he said. "It doesn't rain now, and I will take good care you don't fall," he added.

She consented, but the steamer was pitching so heavily that after a few turns Miss Neville said she would rather sit down.

So Carew provided her with a sheltered seat, brought a warm rug to wrap about her feet and seated himself beside her. It was now almost dark. A few stars shone here and there in the stormy sky.

The wind shrieked and whistled drearily. The deck was deserted. For quite a long time both were silent. Then Carew said in a half whisper:

"You are trembling. You are not afraid of the storm, are you? It is nothing for the bay, I assure you."

"No—I am not afraid."

"You feel quite safe here with me?" he went on, sinking his voice lower yet.

"Yes," she answered somewhat tremulously.

After a pause he laid his hand on hers as it rested on her knee and said in an odd, deliberate kind of way:

"Will you let me take care of you always? I mean as my wife. I have grown to love you very dearly, and I think I could make you happy."

For perhaps a minute there was utter silence.

Then Carew withdrew his hand, saying hastily and in an indefinitely changed voice: "Ah! you do not care for me. Perhaps it is as well, and perhaps I had no right to ask you to do so. I forgot for a moment that I am a man under a cloud—a cloud that in all probability will never be lifted, for I tell you honestly I have no means of righting myself. Forget what I have said."

The words and tone were hardly lovable, but there was a slight, almost imperceptible quiver in the deep voice.

A small hand stole softly into his. "I do care for you," said a happy little voice, "and I would take your word against all the world."

Another pause. Carew did not even press the hand he held. Then he said harshly: "But suppose I cannot give you my word? Suppose I tell you that I am what our fellow passengers think I am?"

"I should not believe you," was the confident answer.

"But if I tell you that you must believe me?" His face as he looked down was very pale and wore an expression she could hardly fathom.

She uttered a half suppressed little cry, but she did not take her hand away—only nestled it farther into his. He grasped it almost painfully; then let it go.

"Foolish, trusting little woman," he said in a strange voice. "Must I give you proof that your trust is misplaced?"

He held out his other hand to her. In its palm lay the ring. Even in the dim light she recognized it at once.

There was a curious, breathless pause, during which Carew never took his eyes from the girl's face.

"Well?" he quietly said at last. He felt her little fingers close tightly on his.

"I can't help it," she said brokenly. "I love you—I love you."

"And will you be my wife?" She could not see his face, but his voice shook.

"Yes," she whispered, hiding her face in both her hands.

But the hands were gently drawn. In the semidarkness she felt his arm come about her, and his mustache brush her lips.

"Darling," he murmured passionately, "you shall never regret it—I swear," and in his eyes glittered something that looked like tears.

Next morning one of the Englishmen who had come on board at Corunna, and who had been ill ever since, appeared on deck. As it happened, the first person he saw was Carew.

They greeted each other cordially, and after the fashion of old friends. This Englishman, by the way, was a well known statesman, and a very good fellow besides.

In the smoking room that afternoon some one kindly put him on his guard as to Carew and supplied the details.

"I thought I would mention it, you know," appended the man who had spoken. "I saw you speaking to him awhile ago."

"Thank you," was the dry answer. "I've known George Carew for a good many years. I think I have a pretty good idea of his idiosyncrasies, and I don't think annexing other people's property is one of them. By the way, you may not have heard that he has come into the title and is now Lord Evandale. I thought I'd mention it, you know," he added with a somewhat grim smile.

In the silence that followed, the speaker lit a fresh cigar, rose and went out.

I blush to have to relate that during the remainder of that day a good many of the Cobra's passengers became suddenly imbued with the conviction of Carew's—or rather Lord Evandale's—innocence and evidenced as much. How their overtures were received perhaps I need not say.

Joyce Neville was a little shy with her lover when she knew. But in the course of a starlit walk on deck he made that all right. She, it seemed, had had the idea that he was rather obscure and hard up than otherwise, at which confession he was a good deal touched.

I think it was on the evening before the Cobra got into Southampton that the head steward made a startling discovery. Mrs. Bouverie's ring was found in a distant corner of the saloon, where it had been effectually concealed by an upstanding corner of the carpet.

Captain North publicly restored the ring to its owner that night at dinner. There was a very uncomfortable silence for a few moments. Every one had an awkward kind of feeling that some sort of apology should be made to the haughty looking young man who was at present helping Miss Neville to claret. And every one had an equally awkward conviction that any apology or any explanation whatsoever would be worse than impossible.

The subject of their thoughts, however, forestalled anything of the kind. There was something rather fine in his appearance just then, as he leaned back in his chair and threw a keen glance first up and then down the table.

"As Mrs. Bouverie is now, I hope, satisfied that I did not steal her ring," he said in a cold, clear voice that penetrated to every corner of the long saloon, "I will explain my reason for refusing to turn out my pockets as the rest of you did. I possess a ring which is the exact fac simile of that possessed by Mrs. Bouverie, and as I had the ring in my pocket on the evening in question I naturally objected to its being mistaken for any other one's property. You are all at liberty to examine it, if Miss Neville chooses."

As he spoke, he turned and slipped the "double" of Mrs. Bouverie's ring on the third finger of Joyce Neville's left hand. The look which accompanied the action spoke volumes.

There was a pause of intense astonishment; then a babel of excited and wondering exclamations, in the midst of which Lord Evandale rose and went out on deck.

The rings were identical, with one exception—in one the initials were N. C.; in the other, C. N.

Mrs. Bouverie looked crushed and unhappy, for of all things she dearly loved a lord. There was weeping and gnashing of teeth, too, in the cabin of the Lennoxes.—Montreal Star.

A Queer Thing About Camels.

Some years ago when the British troops were fighting against the forces of the Mahdi in the Sudan opportunity was afforded to many of the correspondents accompanying the expedition to study the habits of the camel. Most of the transportation of the soldiers' baggage was done by these ships of the desert, as they are called, and at night some of the newspaper men spent a portion of their leisure trying to learn something new about these strange creatures.

One of them, who was an inveterate smoker, discovered that the camel is a great lover of tobacco. Let any one smoke a pipe or cigar in the camel compound, said he, and the camel will follow the smoker about, place his nose close to the burning tobacco, inhale the fumes with a prolonged sniff, swallow the smoke, then throwing his head up, with mouth agape and eyes upturned, showing the bloodshot whites, will grunt a sigh of ecstasy that would make the fortune of a low comedian in a love scene.—Harper's Young People.

About a year ago I took a violent attack of the gripe. I coughed day and night for about six weeks; my wife then suggested that I try Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. At first I could see no difference, but still kept taking it, and soon found that it was what I needed. I got no relief from one dose I took another, and it was only a few days until I was free from the cough. I think people in general ought to know the value of this remedy and to take pleasure in acknowledging the benefit I have received from it. Madison, O., Wm. & Stevens, Druggists.

Why? Why is Strictly Pure White Lead the best paint? Because it will outlast all other paints, give a handsomer finish, better protection to the wood, and the first cost will be less.

If Barytes and other adulterants of white lead are "just as good" as Strictly Pure White Lead, why are all the adulterated white leads always branded Pure, or

"Strictly Pure White Lead?"

This Barytes is a heavy white powder (ground stone), having the appearance of white lead, worthless as a paint, costing only about a cent a pound, and is only used to cheapen the mixture. What shoddy is to cloth, Barytes is to paint. Be careful to use only old and standard brands of white lead.

WINDOM.

NO PLAN OR PURPOSE.

In all its times of internal dissension, the democracy never showed quite as divided a front as it does now. When congress was called together in a special session last August, there was a general impression that the house would pass a tariff bill after the silver bill had been repealed. Then it was said that it would be better to wait until the regular session; so that, the committee work having been done in the interim, the bill could be ready for immediate action by the first Monday in December. Nearly two months have passed since that, nearly a year has elapsed since the party took control of the government, and the last desperate hope to-day of its intelligent leaders is that they may succeed in having the tariff bill sent back to committee, so that the house may find out where it is and what it means to do.

ANXIOUS TO SEE IT DIE.

After all that has been said about the tariff, it is actually the only hope of democracy now to be able to defeat the bill of its own making. Beginning with an attempt to link a superior protection with a still more spurious free trade the bosses have hung about the neck of their offspring the mill stone of an income tax. It must not be wondered at that democratic members are actually resigning their seats rather than bear the odium which surrounds their party, and that the chance of defeating the Wilson bill is anticipated eagerly.

HISTORY REPEATS.

When the republicans assumed the reins of government in 1861 they found the treasury bankrupted by a democratic administration and government bonds seeking a market in Wall street at the enormous interest of 12 per cent per annum. Now, after an interval of thirty-three years, the democratic party is again in the saddle and signals its accession by a return to its old habit of plunging the country in debt.

Word comes from Washington that Secretary Hoke Smith does not approve of the Vilas Knight public land grabs. It will be time enough to believe when Senator Vilas' special agent Judge Lamoreaux, has resigned as commissioner of the general land office.

Thirty years ago the nation (under republican rule) had to issue bonds and levy an income tax, and the democrats seem to think that it was those acts that gave it such a strong hold on the people. But new bonds and an income tax in times of peace!

Is there one democrat within the length and breadth of the United States who is not thoroughly ashamed of the present administration, he can get a situation by applying to the nearest dime museum.

The difference is this: Under republican control, a surplus in the treasury; under democratic, a deficit, and then who ever heard of 40 cents a day for wages under a republican administration?

Her Choice Made.

Bessie, aged 4—Mamma, does folks marry in heaven?
Mamma—The good book says they do not, Bessie.
"Do they marry in—the other place?"
"I presume not, my dear.
"Then I'm going to stay right here."

A Villainous Stab.

Chicago Man—I have been in your town, and I want to declare myself that all the talk about it being so slow is without foundation.
Philadelphia, delighted—So?
"That's what. When anything is absolutely motionless it is a grievous error to say that it is slow."

THE MUTE PRAYER

Which a Deaf and Dumb Mother Offered in a Chicago Court.

There was a pathetic scene in a Chicago court recently. A divorce case had been called for judgment. The wife sat surrounded by her legal advisors. Her face she kept shaded with her hands. Through the open door that led into Judge Horton's private room occasionally came childish prattle and peals of innocent laughter. The mother's head was bowed with grief. Then the judge spoke. His solemn tones rang through the room. His words were few. He bade the woman go in freedom, and charged her with the safety of her child.

But she did not need the spoken decree. Her lawyer bent over to explain. Apparently she did not understand. Suddenly there was a happy shout. Like a ray of sunlight a golden-haired child sprang out of Judge Horton's room and rushed pell mell into her mother's arms. The two lost, themselves in each other's embrace. Tears of joy coursed down the mother's cheeks. She kissed and felt her darling's face with trembling fingers.

Then she left her seat, and, going to the front of the judge's bench, fell upon her knees.

She lifted her hands first to heaven, then to Judge Horton, and then to her child, as if to invoke divine blessing on his wisdom. Her eyes were red with weeping.

For several moments the strange pantomime continued. And the little daughter stood with her hand upon her mother's shoulder, smiling through her tears at the judge.

"Mamma's deaf and dumb, sir," she finally said. "She's asking God to bless you for giving me back to her."

A BRAVE BRAKEMAN.

Alone He Saved a Train of Twelve Cars From Destruction.

Rhode Island papers are bestowing praise on William Eastman, whose father was long the Free Baptist preacher in the town of Parkman, Me. Mr. Eastman is a brakeman, and not long ago a freight train on which he was employed, and from which the locomotive had been uncoupled, to allow it to run to its destination, alone, broke in two, leaving Eastman the only brakeman on fourteen cars, which were headed straight for the harbor in Stonington with a prospect of going overboard. Employees in the yard shouted to Eastman to save himself by jumping, but he stuck to his post, braving one car after another, until, in the short interval allowed him, he had tightened up the brakes on half the train. At the last instant he sprang across to the top of the caboose on the next track, and the train he had just abandoned crashed heavily into the bumper at the end of the depot, and through the west wall of the structure, the first car hanging over the waters of the harbor, when it came to a standstill. Seven cars were more or less damaged, but the brakeman escaped unhurt. Now they are saying around the yard at Stonington that if Eastman had dropped off the train in the first place and left it to take care of itself, several cars would have gone overboard.

ALL HE WANTED.

The Tramp Was Not Hard to Please Under the Circumstances.

"What do you want?" she asked of the tramp who had made his way around to the kitchen door.
"Nothin' much, ma'am," he replied, with a politeness that awakened her suspicion.

"Money, I suppose. We don't give tramps money."

"No'm. I don't want no money."

"Well, we have no victuals, except for dinner, and they ain't done yet."

"I don't even ask for none of yer dinner, ma'am. All I want is some dry bread; jest dry bread."

She was touched.

"Poor man!" she exclaimed. "Here, I'll give you a piece of pie, anyhow."

"No'm. I druther hev the dry bread."

"Do you like it?"

"No, but yer see me an' the rest' of the boys he's hustled aroun' till we've got a turkey, an' some celery, an' some cranberry sauce an' some plum puddin', an' all we want now is jes' the dry bread ter make the stuffin' of."

An Exercise for Henry's Father.

Mr. Lowry is a man with a moderate income and one child, a boy of 11 or 12 years, whom he is already sending to a French master, who is accustomed to be paid every Monday. Recently Mr. Lowry sent Henry to his lesson without the usual bank-note. That evening the father did as he always does—looked over the boy's exercise, and this is what he found Henry doing his best to put into Parisian French: "I have no money. The week is up. Have you no money? Has your father no money? I need money. What is the day of the week? The day of the week is Monday. Does your father know the day of the week?"

A Spring Chicken Bon Mot.

The rooster in the yard of a country boarding house called an old hen aside. "You want to look out," he said, kindly. "The proprietor told his guests yesterday he would give them a spring chicken and he's laying for you." "Well," she sighed, resignedly, "I presume I have no right to object. I've been laying for him a good many years."

Because of the intense pains in my stomach and side, and also on account of gall stones.

After eating I would be in great distress. I became so reduced in flesh that my friends thought I would not live long.

ASHTON PETITION IS ON THE STREET

MOTION FOR A NEW TRIAL
HEARD THURSDAY.

Defendant Never Stirred When the Announcement of the Verdict Was Made--Says He Is Sorry He Ever Came From Canada to Wisconsin--Jury in Tears.

Arguments for a new trial in the Ashton case will not be made until Thursday afternoon. It was first set for Tuesday, but Judge Bennett agreed to a postponement. Meanwhile a petition is being circulated upon the streets the heading of which declares that the verdict was not justified by the evidence, and asking that Judge Bennett grant a new trial. The petition finds comparatively few signers, however as people concede that twelve men who heard the testimony from not go to the depot with the husband and father. When Sheriff Bear said "Come on, Matt," and the defendant rose to go, Mrs. Ashton climbed up and kissed her husband, who towered a foot and a half over her in height. The cress was not returned, and the mother and children departed in one direction while the defendant went in the other. The family drove to their town of Fulton home, while Ashton and the sheriff left for the Hotel Myers to wait until 8:40, when they took the "accommodation" to Jefferson, the Janesville jail being under quarantine restriction.

"It's pretty hard," said Ashton, "on an innocent man. I have a farm of 265 acres in Canada; as good a farm as there is in Rock county; it is all stocked and clear of debt--and I wish to God I'd never left it!"

When they got to Jefferson and entered the model new jail with its clean new furniture and bright electric light, Ashtons remarked that it was a nice comfortable place.

Wants to Come Back Soon.

"When are you coming after me again?" he asked the sheriff.

"The first of the week."

"All right," came the reply, "I cannot stay here very many days for the boys cannot run that big farm all alone."

No handcuffs decorated the prisoner's hands when they left. Mr. Hyzer had asked the sheriff not to manacle Ashton so the sheriff took Deputy Nelson with him instead of irons.

Attorneys for the defense and the state began at once to prepare for Tuesday's proceedings. Few men are called upon to carry the load of responsibility that has rested upon District Attorney Wheeler since the Ashton case began. He massed his facts and arranged his evidence with a skill. He and Attorney B. F. Dunwiddie, who walked with him throughout the trial had to cope with the most sagacious of opposition.

Hon. John Winans conducted the examination of most of the non-medical witness for the defense, while E. M. Hyzer gave especial attention to the "experts." Mr. Hyzer's preparation for this feature of the case included several months of the most thorough study, the result being shown in the searching cross examinations given to witnesses for the state.

W. A. WOODRUFF TO GET $8,000.

Aunt in Grand Rapids Dies and Leaves Him That Amount.

That an aunt in Grand Rapids, Michigan, had died and left an estate, $8,000 of which would fall to him, was the word that came to William A. Woodruff to-day. Mrs. J. O. Clapp was the aunt's name, and her death occurred at Grand Rapids yesterday.

Mrs. Clapp was Woodruff's father's sister, and had often spoken of adopting Woodruff when a boy. Mr. Woodruff was for some time an employee of the Wisconsin Telephone Company, but is now working for the Empire Cross Spring Company.

Facts Worth Knowing.

In all diseases of the nasal mucous membrane the remedy used must be non-irritating. Nothing satisfactory can be accomplished with douches, snuffs, powders or astringents, because they are irritating, do not thoroughly reach the affected surfaces and should be abandoned as worse than failures. A multitude of persons who had for years borne all the worry and pain that catarrh can inflict testify to radical and permanent cures wrought by Ely's Cream Balm. Your druggist has it.

TOO PRISONERS "BREAK OUT"
DESPITE VACCINATION.

Tramps Who Pounded Officer Kruse Saw Through a Jail Bar and Got Away During the Night--Bon Fire Made of All Infected Clothing and Fixtures.

Even vaccination didn't keep the prisoners at the jail from "breaking out." Two of them broke out last night, and have gone away, presumably for treatment.

George Smith and George Thomas, the two tramps who pounded Officer Kruse, are the men who escaped. They sawed through an iron bar fully an inch thick, and got away shortly after midnight last night. Turnkey Griffey is the only officer who was in the jail when quarantine was established, and he is kept busy preventing disorder during the day. The two men who escaped are thought to have taken an early train for Chicago.

There was a small bon-fire at the county jail last evening. It was built out in the jail yard under direction of the health officer. All the infected bedding and clothes used by Black, the small pox patient, were piled on the fire and burned to ashes. The jail was then disinfected throughout.

Mrs. Bear and her daughter, Miss Maud, are shut up in the sheriff's residence, they being the only members of the sheriff's family caught in the building when quarantine took effect.

Disease Cannot Spread.

"We are getting along very well," said Miss Bear over the telephone this afternoon. "The only thing to worry us is the fact that we are to be shut up here for two weeks. The only communications we have is over the telephone."

There appears to be no danger of any further spread of the scourge. Dr. Merzies, who has charge of the Dane county sick prisoners, has vaccinated all those who required it, and Dr. Whiting has attended to the Rock county people in the same manner.

Black was removed to the city pest house down by the brewery late Saturday night, where he will be kept until all danger of the contagion is over.

At death's door Dr. Henry Palmer lay last night, after being suddenly stricken with heart trouble. This morning he rallied, and at 3 o'clock this afternoon he was resting comfortably and much improved.

Early in the evening Dr. Palmer went to Palmer & Stevens' drugstore to make some purchases. While standing there he complained of oppression about the heart. C. D. Stevens hastened to his assistance, and the doctor rallied enough to walk to his office with Mr. Stevens' help. The family were notified of his illness by telephone and hastened to the office where Dr. W. H. Palmer was attending his father.

About midnight he was well enough to be taken home. Angina pectoris or neuralgia of the heart was the disease that attacked him and his condition is still regarded as serious.

BESIDE MY FIRE.

Beside my fire, what care I for the storm,
Or for the rain that patters on the roof,
Or faithless spring who holds her lover aloof,
Twilight may fade to dark. 'Tis bright and warm
Beside my fire.

Beside my fire, watching the firelight glow,
The fitful gleams with artist touch have wrought
A wondrous change, 'til in my chamber
Is what it was. Its outline scarce I know,
Beside my fire.

Beside my fire, as with a lover's pride,
Who naught but virtues in his mistress spies,
While every fault for him in shadow lies,
So by the blaze my room is glorified,
Beside my fire.

—Mary H. Jopling in Good Housekeeping.

A HEROIC DAUGHTER

In the year 1476 the city of Nancy, in Lorraine, was besieged by Charles the Bold, duke of Burgundy, a warrior of the most heroic daring, but whose harsh and irritable temper often drove him to commit acts of wanton cruelty.

The governor of Nancy at that time, whose name history has not preserved, was a man of dauntless courage and great military experience, and, moreover, an excellent and devoted father. His only child, whose mother had died in giving her birth, was the joy and pride of his heart and shone conspicuously among all the maidens of her time for her goodness and knowledge.

Tesila at the date of the siege was in her eighteenth year, and had already received many offers of marriage from nobles attracted by the charms of her beauty and amiability, but she refused all suitors, preferring to watch over the declining days of her gray haired father, and by her love and devotion cheer and prolong his existence.

The inhabitants, led by their governor, in whose skill and judgment they had the utmost confidence, made a brave defense against the countless troops of the fiery duke.

All the men and youths capable of bearing arms had taken weapons, as was fitting in the time of danger, and posted themselves on the ramparts to beat off every attack.

The aged men encouraged the faint hearted and insisted on the women aiding, as far as their strength permitted, by carrying stones to the walls to be hurled down on the besiegers; they also lighted fires under enormous caldrons filled with pitch, oil and even water, and when the enemy ventured on an assault the seething mass was poured on their devoted heads.

Nothing that the most resolute bravery and experienced skill could accomplish was left undone to defend the town, and Charles, after vainly endeavoring for a considerable time to take the place by assault, at length resolved to make overtures of peace, hoping thus to gain the end which it seemed useless to expect from force of arms.

He whose custom it was to deliver every conquered city to be plundered and burned; he who, after a successful siege, invariably wreaked his bitterest vengeance on the inhabitants and defenders, now proposed to the governor and inhabitants of Nancy that they should surrender and open to him the gates of the city, pledging himself to protect their dwellings and property from all plundering, and to take care that no one should suffer the least harm either in life or possessions. The proposals caused many to waver, but the noble governor, who had grown gray in the service of his prince, stepped forward and declared that he would rather be buried under the ruins of the ramparts than deliver up the city to the enemy, so long as there were means to defend it. He encouraged soldiers and citizens to bravery and perseverance and implored them to keep the city for their sovereign, the Duke of Lorraine, and he succeeded so well by his enthusiastic eloquence that all swore to sacrifice their lives rather than surrender.

While the brave governor thus reanimated the courage of the men, his daughter, on her side, raised the women's fainting spirits and cheered them by her presence and inspiring words, and by her own conduct gave the example to maids and matrons to share in the hardships and dangers of the defense. She reminded them how, a short time before, when the Duke of Burgundy besieged the town of Beauvais, the women had taken up arms and fought beside the men on the ramparts and how they had succeeded in driving back the besiegers.

"These brave women were far fewer than we are," continued Tesila, "while the enemy was the same in number and strength. Why should we be afraid, when we have before us such an example of devoted patriotism?"

This speech made the greatest impression on the minds of her listeners. Fresh courage was instilled into men and women, and no one spoke of surrender.

Meanwhile, Charles had recourse to every stratagem that ingenuity could devise to endeavor to render himself master of the town. During the night watches he kept the besieged in a state of alarm by continual feints of attack, and then, as morning advanced, when they were quite wearied and worn out, he would rush with tenfold violence to the assault.

He caused large stones to be hurled by the machines at the walls wherever they were weakest, in the hope of making a breach, which at last, by the greatest efforts, he succeeded in doing, and after two hours' desperate fighting he forced a entrance into the city, breathing vengeance against its defenders, whose obstinate resistance, combined with the loss he had sustained of his bravest warriors, had enraged him beyond measure. But it was especially against the governor that all his anger and hatred were directed, as he knew that the latter had steadfastly refused the terms of capitulation and had induced the inhabitants to offer such prolonged resistance.

He swore that the governor should be the first on whom his relentless vengeance would fall, but his intended victim, to escape recognition, had disguised himself in an ordinary citizen's dress, and now stood, unknown, among the assembled inhabitants, who were awaiting their fate at the hands of the enraged duke.

Charles demanded that the governor should be instantly delivered up to him, but the people would rather die themselves than betray their beloved chief into the hands of the bloody conqueror.

Duke Charles threatened to destroy all with fire and sword if his demands were not instantly complied with, while at the same time he promised a large reward to whomsoever would point out the governor's hiding place.

His threats and promises were equally vain. All remained silent.

Then stepped forth an old man—it was the governor himself in his disguise—and said that he would reveal the secret if the duke would swear on his word to pardon all the inhabitants and protect their property.

"Never!" roared the infuriated duke. "In a town taken by assault the victor allows no terms to be dictated to him, and I will take such measures to discover your governor as shall strike terror into your hearts." Whereupon he declared that every tenth person should die and ordered his heralds to proceed to the work of numbering the people.

Then the men and women, boys and girls, old and young, were placed in one long rank, which reached from the spot where Charles was holding his court to the uttermost fortification of the city.

All grew pale, and deadly fear was in every countenance as they listened to the terrible sentence. As father, mother, daughter and son stood side by side, each trembled for the other's life. The air resounded with the weeping and wailing of women who had a short time before defied the enemy; the men stood silent with bent heads.

The duke now signed to his heralds to begin the counting and to separate every tenth person, whose head should fall by the sword.

Tesila had placed herself close beside her father and was now trembling for his life. She watched, with eye sharpened by love and fear, every movement of the heralds, and always counted in advance in order to discover if her dear father would be one of the doomed. With horror she recognized that the fatal number would fall on him.

In a moment her resolution was formed and carried out. She slipped gently behind him, and placing herself on his right side so contrived that he would be No. 9, while she herself would be the tenth. The herald drew near, and it was only when the doom fell upon his daughter that the father understood why she had changed her place. Wildly he besought the herald to take him; he was the one on whom the fatal number should fall; Tesila had purposely changed her place to save him.

Tesila maintained that it had only happened by chance, and while taking care not to reveal the secret of her father's identity she earnestly begged to be allowed to die, as the lot had fallen on her. For a long time father and daughter maintained the loving dispute, and at last the herald, not daring to decide, led them both to the duke.

The father insisted on dying for his daughter; that the doom rightfully was his; while the daughter implored them to take her life and spare her gray haired father.

Charles hesitated long as to how he should decide; he was quite ignorant of whom he had before him, for no word had fallen during their noble strife which could betray their rank.

But at length the governor cried aloud:

"Mighty duke, do not hesitate as to which of us you shall condemn to death. I will give up to you the man who has so roused your vengeance, for whom so many brave citizens must die. See, the governor stands before you; kill him, but spare my daughter, this peerless example of filial love!"

The bystanders as they listened to these words were filled with dread expectation of what would follow. All were moved to tears and trembled for the life of their beloved governor, who, with such noble heroism, was willing to die that they might be pardoned. They surrounded himself and daughter in close ranks, as if to form a rampart so that the murderer's sword might only reach him through their faithful hearts.

The duke, accustomed though he was to slaughter and destruction, had never before witnessed such a touching scene. The whole people raised a cry of supplication and implored their conqueror to put them to death and spare him whom they held so dear.

Gradually the stern features of the duke relaxed, a softened expression stole over them, and at last, rising from his seat, amid universal silence, he addressed father and daughter in the following words:

"You have touched the innermost depths of my heart; you shall not die. If it is sweet to conquer, let me feel that it is sweeter still to pardon. Noble Tesila, you have saved your father. May you enjoy for long years the happiness of watching over and caring for his old age. And you, noble old man, brave as you are in war, may your happiness as a father exceed your bravery—your, who have reared so heroic a daughter. It does my heart good in the midst of the awful bloodshed and slaughter to find such love and devotion. You have made me experience how sweet and pleasant are the feelings of benevolence, and therefore not only you, but all the inhabitants, are pardoned."—Strand Magazine.

A Novel Occupation.

A peculiar advertisement recently appeared in an English paper. A woman describing herself as "a lady with spare time daily" offered to play bezique with invalids or other persons desiring a partner in the game. She wanted remuneration, and concludes by asking "what offers?"

TRUE TO NATURE.

A young woman who is a pew-holder in the cathedral at Buffalo was refused admittance to her seat, one day recently, by another young woman who was occupying the pew, and who said she was reserving it for some friends. She stepped into the next seat, and from there over the back of the seat into her own pew.

COLLEGE OF WIT.

"What experience as an electric expert have you had?" "I've been struck by lightning."

"Did the office seek the colonel?" "Yes, but he had three days' start and there was no reward out for him."

"I see one of your old delinquents has paid the debt of nature." "Thank heaven," muttered the editor, "he has paid something at last."

Train Robber—Come! shell out! Rural Minister—If I had such energetic fellows as you to pass the plate now and then, I might have something to give you.

"That is a wonderfully bright dog of Timmins'. Can do almost anything but talk." "That makes them a pretty good team. Timmins can do nothing but talk."

"Bridget, those capers for the sauce to night are so large you would better cut them." "I'll do nothing of the sort, mum, for I've always been respectable, and never cut a caper in my life."

Mistress—I don't want you to have so much company. You have more callers in a day than I have in a week. Domestic—Well, mum, perhaps if you'd try to be a little more agreeable you'd have as many friends as I have.

Little Johnny—Mrs. Talkedown paid a big compliment to me to-day. Mother—Did she really? Well, there's no denying that woman has sense. What did she say? Little Johnny—She said she didn't know how you came to have such a nice little boy as I am.

A few English workmen were discussing names of great scientists in Manchester. The name of Darwin cropped up. One of the company, less learned than the rest said: "Darwen, I kna that place. The Complexion of a Chinese

Is not yellower than that of an unfortunate individual whose liver complaint has assumed the chronic form. The eyeballs of the sufferer assume a saffron hue, there is dull pain in the region of the organ affected, the tongue is coated, the breath sour, sick headaches usually but not always occur, and there is sometimes dizziness arising from a sitting posture. Constipation and dyspepsia are also trademarks of this very common ailment, always in its aggravated form, liable to breed abscesses of the liver, which are very dangerous. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which eradicates it as well as the troubles connected with it and which it originates. In chills and fever, a complaint which always yields to the Bitters, the liver is seriously involved. This fine alterative tonic removes costiveness and indigestion, rheumatic, nervous and kidney trouble and debility.

READING ADVERTISEMENTS.

Information, as Well as Profit and Amusement to Be Gained Thereby.

Twenty years ago a man was held to be an exceedingly daring advertiser if, in the course of a year, he bought $50,000 worth of space in the journals of his own country alone. The enterprise has so expanded that now a man is not held to be a large advertiser unless he spends every year for this purpose, in the United States alone, from $300,000 to $500,000.

The great increase of advertising has produced a noticeable change in all papers and magazines. Readers are not slow to discover the enormous increase in advertising matter, but they are not so ready to consider that this has made possible, and indeed has required, much larger and much cheaper periodicals. The readers who complain of the excessive amount of advertisements would hardly care to go back to the old-style, diminutive and high-priced papers, says the Golden Rule. Indeed, much satisfaction is to be gained from the right reading of the advertisements themselves. At one time for many months Frank R. Stockton was unable to use his eyes, and his friends had to read to him. When at last he was able to read for himself, the members of his household were exceedingly curious to know what sort of reading he would call for first. A great shout of laughter arose when the novelist in all seriousness called eagerly for advertisements. The fact was, that during all those months of darkness, his friends had read to him everything else but the advertisements, and in regard to these he had an intellectual famine. It may well be imagined that a humorist can find food in advertisements. No species of literature so persistently and frankly as these makes its appeal to human nature, and in none, therefore, is human nature so clearly and frankly disclosed. Much information, moreover, is to be gained from them, and in the case of the more extravagant of them we learn what to avoid, while the more worthy ones widen our knowledge of good and useful things. We should read advertisements, not as the credulous loafer, but as a philosopher, and as a student of human nature and human achievements. Perused after this fashion, this glaring literature will prove not the least profitable matter in our journals.

What Will Do It?

Medical writers claim that the successful remedy for nasal catarrh must be non-irritating, easy of application, and one that will reach the remote sores and ulcerated surfaces. The history of the efforts to treat catarrh is proof positive that only one remedy has completely met these conditions, and that is Ely's Cream Balm. This safe and pleasant remedy has mastered catarrh as nothing else has ever done, and both physicians and patients freely concede this fact. Our druggists keep it.

The following notice is posted in the pension office at Washington: "Members of the medical division are forbidden to have their hats or clothing on preparatory to leaving this office before 4 o'clock. Anyone breaking this rule will be charged with a demerit of fifteen minutes." Why they shouldn't have clothing on till 4 p. m. is a subject for conjecture.

When Scheffel was staying in Italy for the benefit of his health, he received from a friend in Germany an unstamped letter containing nothing but the following words: "I am quite well. Yours truly." Annoyed at having to pay the double postage, the poet packed a boulder stone of enormous weight in a case and dispatched it to his friend without paying the carriage. The latter, in the belief that the package contained something of considerable value, willingly paid the high transport and opened the case. His feelings on opening it may be better imagined than described. On a label affixed to the stone he read as follows: "On receipt of the news as to the state of your health my heart was relieved of this load."

A DAILY BIT OF FUN.

A Contractor's Advice.

Dullman's German Medicine Co., Gentlemen: I take great pleasure in testifying in behalf of Dullman's German Blood, Liver, and Kidney Cure. I can safely say that I have taken such medicine as that to cleanse my stomach and kidneys. I was suffering for years with biliousness, indigestion and loss of appetite. I sleep. One bottle of it did me more good than six months' other treatment, and I feel it my duty to testify in its behalf, so others may be cured.

America's Great Danger

AN ENGLISH COMMENTARY.

Said an eminent English scientist recently: "The danger that confronts the great American people to-day is not the possible adoption of a wrong financial policy for the nation, or the spread of socialism, or the increase of corruption among public men. All these are bad enough, to be sure, but they are as nothing compared to the terrible national disease—I had almost said national crime—of overwork. The mad rush for wealth is set at a killing pace, and thousands fall by the way every year."

You are likely to be one of the victims!

How do we know? Because it is the exception to find a man or woman of adult age in perfect health. Nervous Disorders are spreading with fearful rapidity. Among the symptoms are—Backache, Biliousness, Cold Hands and Feet, Dizziness, Hot Flashes, Fluttering Sensation, Fainting, Headache, Hysteria, Irritability of the Heart, Melancholy, Failing Memory, Palpitation, Rheumatism, Short Breath, Sleeplessness, Nervous Dyspepsia, Sexual Debility, Fits, etc.

REV. C. A. CARROLL, pastor First Baptist Church, Yellow Springs, O., writes as follows: "I have used Dr. Miles' Restorative Nerve for the past six months. I find it acts like a charm on the whole nervous system. I have not found its equal in giving immediate relief. Dr. Miles' Little Nerve and Liver Pills only need a trial and they will recommend themselves to be the best pills in the market."

"For five years I have suffered from Nervous Prostration. I was unable to work or sleep. The first dose of Dr. Miles' Restorative Nerve gave me relief, and one thousand dollars would not cover the good it has done me."—JOHN MINCHER, Youngstown, Ohio.

Dr. Miles' Restorative Nerve is unequalled in curing Nervous Diseases. It contains no opiates or dangerous drugs. Sold on a positive guarantee by all druggists, or Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind.

ON TEACHING MUSIC.

Notes from a Teacher's Diary—Four Hand Music—Encourage Pupils.

A teacher of the pianoforte, writing in The Ende, says:

In earlier teaching days I had some difficulty in teaching from a treble staff—i. e., "two hands in treble"—until I adopted the plan of using four hand music almost from the beginning of the course, for then the pupils see the necessity of reading the left hand part the same as that for the right. Then when a lesson came for solo treble work I simply said, "Read and play same as in (primo) duet." At once they catch the idea, and there is no more trouble.

In teaching young pupils the full staccato touch I use a simple but useful method. I tell the pupil to imagine the keyboard to be a hot stove and to touch the keys without burning the fingers. The spirit of the game is entered into with gusto, and at once a good, crisp, staccato touch is produced. Indeed you can accomplish many desired results by working upon a pupil's imaginative powers. They become interested, and the lesson hour is made pleasant for both teacher and pupil.

Do not fail to praise a pupil for a good lesson or when an unusually difficult passage has been conquered. It will spur them to renewed efforts and will strengthen the tie of sympathy between teacher and pupil. If there is anything about the performance of the lesson that can be commended, do it. Pupils need encouragement quite as much as criticism. In fact, they should always go together. If one has worked hard and faithfully upon a lesson, even though a part of it may have been practiced wrong, there should at least be commendation for the work done at the same time that the error is pointed out, and enough repetition of that part to insure a correct rendering afterward. Enthusiasm on the part of the teacher and music suited to the needs and taste of the pupil are the two things most essential to interest and hold pupils.

Scalloped Veal.

Chop fine, put layers in dish with alternate layers of cracker dust, salt and pepper and butter. Pour over two beaten eggs mixed with a pint of milk. Cover and bake one-half hour. Remove cover and brown.

Veal cream is also a delicious preparation. Stew veal tender, add a slice of onion, one-third of a cupful of raw rice; simmer one hour. Add seasoning, a cupful of hot cream and serve.

Round of Beef Stew.

Take 4 or 5 pounds of the round of beef and put it into water enough to cover it. When the water has been thoroughly skimmed, add 2 turnips, 2 carrots and 2 onions chopped small, half a dozen cloves and salt and pepper to taste. Cover close and boil very gently four or five hours. A short time before dinner add a teaspoonful of sweet marjoram, half a cup of tomato catchup and a tablespoonful of flour wet smooth in cold water. This is a very economical dish. The beef is very good cold, and the soup is excellent.

Good Milk Toast.

Put a pint of milk into a double boiler; rub 3 tablespoonfuls of butter and a tablespoonful of flour to a cream; add to the scalded milk, and stir until it thickens. Season with salt. Toast 6 slices of bread a light brown, slightly butter each slice and dip it, while it is hot, into the scalded milk. Lay them in the dish, and over each slice put a large spoonful of the milk, pour over it the remainder of the milk, and serve at once.

Outlined Embroidery.

The Housewife furnishes a very pretty design for a photograph frame. This de-

EMBROIDERED PHOTOGRAPH FRAME. sign is outlined in fine silk cord on velvet, linen or satin jean and filled with fine veining stitches.

For the Traveler.

A pocket pencil, tiny looking glass, lead pencil, penknife and bottle of salts are often wanted, even on a short journey. It is an excellent plan to have a small bottle of Farina's eau de cologne in one's traveling bag or reticule. The dust in the railway carriage has a terrible way of settling on the face, notwithstanding the intervening veil. At the end of a journey a corner of a cambric handkerchief, well saturated with eau de cologne and passed over the face, removes every telltale trace and proves delightfully refreshing as well. Many women use cold cream for the same purpose, but the process is a less cleanly one.

Aluminium Cooking Utensils.

Aluminium utensils for cooking purposes are now in the market, and are so light of weight and easily kept bright and shining that they will no doubt soon be quite generally used by the progressive housekeeper. Their cost is about the same as the best quality of granite ware—the only quality, by the way, that is profitable to buy. Aluminium is desirable for saucepans, baking tins and perhaps frying pans, but will probably not soon, if ever, altogether take the place of the heavier utensils required for some kinds of cooking. The metal, it is claimed, is only corroded when an excess of salt is used in cooking.

Did His Duty.

There was but one church in the town, and that was a Presbyterian. There were a few Universalists in the town who once held a meeting in a school-house. One Sabbath during the services in the church, some one came up the aisle and handed the pastor a notice, and quickly retired. While the hymn was being sung the minister looked at the notice. He had never been asked to give such a notice before; but by the time the long hymn was ended he was ready. He got up and said: "Brethren and sisters, I have been requested to give notice here to-day that a set of people who believe in universal salvation will hold a meeting next Lord's Day in the red school-house in the North-east district. But, brethren, we believe better things!" —Argonaut.

The Drum of the Najas.

A drum in use among the Najas of India is formed of the trunk of a large tree, hollowed, elaborately carved and painted in front, after the manner of a figurehead of a ship and furnished at the other end with a straight tail. The drum is raised from the ground on logs of wood. It is sounded by letting a heavy piece of wood fall against it and by beating it with double-headed hammers.

Chicago Board of Trade.

CHICAGO, Jan. 27.—There was a firmer market for wheat this morning. There was a gain of $\frac{3}{8}$ ¢ from last night, then $\frac{1}{8}$ ¢ reaction, then firmness and dullness with the price about $\frac{1}{8}$ ¢ over the close Friday. The decrease of 472,000 bu in and afloat for Europe was disappointing. The increase in Australian stocks was nearly 2,000,000. Chicago stocks of wheat will increase again considerably. The best that is expected of the visible is a decrease of 500,000 bu, and this is guess work. Reports covering Indiana, Illinois, Missouri, Kansas and Nebraska, say that high winds have caused bare fields and damage reports to wheat likely to follow. This was confirmed by reports to the Modern Miller. The May price started at 63 $\frac{3}{4}$ ¢, with an upturn to 63 $\frac{1}{2}$ ¢ for a moment, a dip to 63 $\frac{1}{4}$ ¢, and then little change for an hour following. The trade got no help from any quarter late in the session and closed at the low point at 63 $\frac{1}{4}$ ¢, or $\frac{1}{8}$ ¢ over last night. January was at 59 $\frac{1}{2}$ ¢, July 64 $\frac{1}{2}$ ¢. With supplies in first hands very low there is hope of a turn favorable to holders.

There was enough reaction in corn this morning to entirely wipe out the advance Wednesday and Thursday when the May price got up to 39 $\frac{1}{2}$ ¢. The reaction yesterday was 38 $\frac{1}{2}$ ¢ to 38 $\frac{1}{4}$ ¢. This morning the early sales were 38 $\frac{1}{2}$ ¢ and then off to 38 $\frac{1}{4}$ ¢ up to the last half hour. January was quoted 34 $\frac{1}{2}$ ¢, July 38 $\frac{1}{2}$ ¢, and the feeling quite heavy. Local stocks and the visible will, of course, increase liberally.

The provision trade got a little more life on the call and after the call. The packers were the principal traders. When hogs lost $\frac{1}{2}$ ¢ at the yards the scalping crowd sold stuff. May pork sold \$13.20 and \$13.15 and up to \$13.27 $\frac{1}{2}$, holding around \$13.25. Lard for May moved up from \$7.55 to \$7.60, ribs from \$6.62 $\frac{1}{2}$ to \$6.70, acting strong.
